"The outer body of orthodoxy," he said, "the popular system of doctrine in the orthodox churches, is clearly not up to date. Very few to-day question the fact that it is outgrown already—that it is dead matter needing to be sloughed off. But of the inner body-the Catholic creeds-comparatively few recognize that the same character holds, though in a less palpable form. Generally speaking, this body of truth is satisfactory to the Christian consciousness. Do these creeds call for implicit and unquestioning and palpably there are details of these great creeds which no longer satisfy the Christian consciousness, which no longer ring true to our thought, square with our knowledge, command our unquestioning acceptance or can be professed in a literal sense. Take the assertion, 'I believe in the resurrection of the body.' Who to-day believes literally in the resurrection of the fleshly, material outer form of the bodily organization, which was unquestionably the meaning of those who framed this article of the "All thought must be kept fluent, ready to take new forms and developments. The new thought and the new knowledge are in every field heresy. It is the hereties in every department of knowledge who keep the body of truth living, growing, open to the assimilation of new knowledge.

"What the new heresy accomplishes for the most part is not to overthrow the old system and prove it wholly faise. What it accomplishes is to show that something has been forgotten, overlooked, held in excess or undiscovered. At last the truth of the lam is absorbed by orthodox practice and becomes a part of its system, and then the ism fails away and disappears. The heretic is the man who realizes that all truth is not as yet known by the Churchnot as yet formulated in its confessions of faith. He it is who brings out some forgotten, overlooked thought which has not found due emphasis in the generally received body of belief. The heresy of today, therefore, often proves itself the orthodoxy of to-morrow. It is a vision of truth seen in advance by the few and gradually forced upon the many. The heresy spreads, it becomes an ism, and we have a heterodoxy, challenging the authority of orthodoxy and threatening its continued hold upon mankind. The leterodoxy proves to hold a truth or truths which the Church needs for its growing development. Orthodoxy becomes leavened by the thought of heterodoxy Orthodoxy receives a new development, takes a fresh growth and moves forward to some higher reach of truth, the heterodoxy thus passing away. We should consider what may be the truths contained iff the isms around the Church."

DR. DIXON TALKS OF WOMEN CYCLISTS.

ARE THE UGLIEST SIGHT TO HIM. The Rev. Dr. A. C. Dixon, in his sermon at the Fourteenth Street Presbyterian Church last even ing, declared that the ugliest thing to him was a woman on a bicycle. Yet he admitted that his daughter rode a wheel. The service was one of a eries of revival meetings, which will be continued though the week. In the course of his remarks Dr. Dixon said: "Your character is your appearance in the sigh of God; reputation is what you seem to men. Preof God; reputation is what you seem to men. Preserve the first at all hazards, but run no foolish risks with either. The good name of woman is beyond price. Avoid infidels and bad men. Let there be no two standards of honor. Never yoke yourself unequally with an unbeliever, and above all things avoid a licentious man. Keep away from places of amusement where womanhood is degraded. The spectacular obscenity at our theatres is frightful. In my boyhood I thought the most beautiful sight was a beautiful woman on a heautiful horse. There are degrees of ugliness, but I think the ugliest sight is a woman on a bicycle. Nevertheless my daughter rides one. If she wants to be ugly, why, I am willing she should be. If you young women want to be ugly in the fresh air don't let my opinion interfere with your bicyclug desires."

SOCIALISTS TO HAVE A NEW PAPER. The eighth annual convention of the Hebrew Socialists was continued at 10 o'clock yesterday morning in Walhella Hall, and did not adjourn until 7 p. m. The principal subject under discussion was he ways and means to depose the present management of the daily newspaper, the "Abend Blatt," and the weekly publication, the "Arbeiter Zeitung," organs of the Socialists. The hall was crowded during the entire time of the meeting crowded during the entire time of the meeting, many of the delegates standing upon chairs. A number of women were in the audience. The committee appointed at the session of the convention on Saturday to ask the present management of the newspapers to relinquish control made its report. It stated that the present management would not let go its grip on the publications. There was an uproar in the hall when the report was received. It was proposed that the Socialists start a new paper. The proposition was adopted by a large majority, after several hours' debate. Then there was another debate as to what name to give the new paper. It was not decided up to the close of the meeting what would be a fitting title for it. The objection to the present organs is that the editors do not allow contributors sufficient freedom in expressing their views.

Hancock and his wife lived alone in the basement of the house. Some months ago, however, the firm he worked for, on account of the bad times, closed down, and since then he had been out of work. He grew melancholy, and on Saturday night his wife went marketing rather late. When she returned soon after midnight she found her husband hanging unconscious from the bedpost. She cut the rope and an ambulance was summoned, but the doctor could do nothing for the man, who died a few minutes after the physician's arrival.

Isnac Tablinsky, sixty-one years old, and his wife, arrived here from Russia two months ago. They took rooms at No. 46 First-st. Tablinsky, who is a tailor, looked for work, but could not obtain any. Early yesterday morning he awoke his wife and told her he was going out for a few minutes to get some water. After waiting nearly half an hour Mrs. Tablinsky became suspicious that everything was not right with her husband, and, going out in the hall to look for him, found his body suspended by a rope from the railing of the stairs. turned soon after midnight she found her husband

WORK OF THE BABIES' HOSPITAL. New-Yorkers are all more or less interested in the saving of the city's poor babies, and part of the work of the last year in this direction-from October 1, 1895, to October 1, 1896-is shown in the last anton-ave, which now enters upon the ninth year of its existence. There are several new features in this report as compared with that of last year is that the institution does not owe a dollar and ha weathered the financial storm successfully. For that reason it asks the continued support of all its old friends. Four hundred and ninety-two babies (known formerly as the dispensary) has been of practical value this year, and its work has increased about 40 per cent over the preceding term. The institution is doing better and more effective work at the present time than ever before. During the winter season Saturday morning clinics are held, which are awakening the needful interest in diseases of infancy. The expenses have been somewhat reduced, and many economies are constantly being practised, which enable the management to ask for the contributions of all persons interested in the care and saving of the sick bables of the city. Contributions of money may be sent to K. V. S. Olcott, No. 32 West Twenty-ninthest, or Henry R. Kunhardt, No. 32 Beaver-st., drawn to the Bables' Hospital.

The contests for the Covell and Gazette trophies were held at the 7th Regiment Armory range last night. Company G carried off the former honor, with a total score of 273, while Company B won the Gazette trophy for the second time, which means that if that company's team captures it again the prize will become its property. The Three members of every team contesting for the Covell Trophy must not be armory sharpshooters, and the competitors for this match are chosen by the captains of the companies they represent. THE PETROLEUM MARKET.

As a natural result of accumulating stocks, the price of crude petroleum declined last week. A well was opeued in the Renfrew pool, in Butler County, Penn., which turned out to be a "gusher." Refined petroleum showed steadiness. The severe weather which has set in will obtiless restrict development work from this time forward. It is calculated that the additions to stocks above ground in January will be in the neighborhood of 200,000 barrels.
